A strange submarine was seen prowling around off Point Loma, at the entrance to the harbor of San Diego, Cal., Saturday, which submerged and disappeared.

At Fort Perry, Pa., a lieutenant and twelve men of the Third Pennsylvania were poisoned by something they ate in a restaurant near their camp. The lieutenant died.

Fourteen states were represented by delegates to the eighty-seventh general assembly of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, which met at Lincoln, Ill., last week.

Cicero addressed the Roman rulers as conscript fathers. The soldiers called to the colors will be conscript sons, chosen for their fitness and enrolled for patriotic service.

The Nashville Tennessean says 20,000 barrels of flour have been purchased and rolled away into local storage rooms by people of that city who never before owned a whole barrel.

The new half million army will be housed in 32 shack towns of 2,000 buildings each. The Hopkinsville boys at Indianapolis are now getting their hands in and by September will know how to fight lumber.

Baseball associations are being hard hit by the war. Players are nearly all subject to draft and the general public is not thinking much about games. Several of the leagues are facing disruption.

Pensions are already being paid for "The War of 1917," as it is officially designated. The wife of Lieut. C. C. Thomas, killed on the Vacuum, and the mother of Frank Hallberg, a sailor, have been allowed pensions.

Dawson Skeen, of Bell Buckle, Tenn., who resigned from the Navy several years ago after two years service as ensign, and became an electrical engineer, has returned to the service. He retired on account of defective eyesight, but his vision has greatly improved.

Congress has put another responsibility on the President. He is to decide whether or not Teddy shall go to France. Now that we are in, Mr. President, let's not discourage any man who wants to fight, but let the Colonel start as a Colonel and serve under regular trained officers.

All Kentucky National Guard troops will be called into federal service from July 15 to August 5. They will then cease to be state militia during the period of the war. All companies are to be recruited to full war strength. Young men have until June 5 to volunteer for service in their home companies. As conscripts they are liable to be sent anywhere.

RUSSIA TO STAND PAT

High Officials of Russia Issue Statement Declaring War Will Be Prosecuted.

ITALIANS PUSHING ON
Berlin Says English Have Attacked on Front From Acheville to Queant.

Again comes news from the Russian front that the Germans, probably owing to the betterment of the internal situation in Russia, have attacked the Russian lines. Last week they essayed an offensive in the Volhynia sector, but met with no marked success. Now the offensive has been switched to the north in the vicinity of Mitau, where they threw an attack against the Russians, but were stopped by the fire of the Russian artillery.

In Rumania there has also been the semblance of an attack against the Russians east of Koveika, but here again the Teutons were dispersed by the Russian guns.

North and east of Gorizia the Italian troops are continuing their successes over the Austrians either in fresh advances or in holding back counterattacks launched with huge effectiveness.

East of Gorizia the Austrian lines were pierced in an attack by the Italians, who took 254 prisoners.

In Macedonia artillery duels and isolated infantry engagements continue.

Still further hope for the solidarity of Russia in the prosecution of the war together with her allies is had from the public statements of three of her highest officials. "Russia cannot hand down to future generations a dishonored reputation," said Premier Lvoff. "The country must speak its imperious word and send its army out to fight."

With Bullecourt firmly in their possession the British troops are giving the Germans no chance for rest and have started another offensive with the idea of bringing their forces to the north of Bullecourt in alignment with those within the village.

Sunday saw Field Marshal Haig's men again strike the German lines hard in this region and carry German positions over a front of more than a mile between Fontaine-Lez-Croiselles and Bullecourt and held them notwithstanding furious counterattacks. The fighting here again was of a sanguinary character and the British war office reports that heavy casualties were inflicted on the Germans.

Although London makes no mention of the fact, the British war office reports an offensive by the British along a fifteen-mile front, extending from the region of Acheville to Queant, which means that again the entire front of the Drocourt-Queant switch-line is being hammered.

Popular Mechanics Magazine
For June

From cover to cover the June Popular Mechanics Magazine is crowded with interesting features both in picture and text, 290 articles and 357 illustrations giving a comprehensive review of late developments in science, mechanics, and invention. How Italian army engineers accomplished the stupendous feat of blowing off the top of a mountain in the Dolomite Alps, is told by Lewis R. Freeman. Mr. Freeman visited the scene of operations at a time when travel was especially dangerous because of frequent avalanches. His story, accompanied by reports of the officers in charge, is one of extraordinary interest. Editorial "Comment and Review," by H. H. Windsor, is imbued with stirring patriotism. His subject are "Universal Training the Only Way," "Training a Good Thing," "Can Food at Home," "Boys, Raise a Sheep," and "High Standard in Our Navy." The laying of the world's biggest telephone cable under the Hudson River is described, with a number of interesting illustrations.

New Orleans Convention Has Busy Sessions on Last Days.

BOARDS ARE ELECTED
Decided That Next Convention Will Be Held in Hot Springs.

New Orleans, May 20.—The 1918 convention of the Southern Baptist denomination will be held in Hot Springs, Ark., next May, provided arrangements for the meeting satisfactory to the executive committee are made. Rev. W. H. Geistweit, St. Louis, was selected to deliver the convention sermon. This was decided by the convention Saturday.

For the first time in the history of the convention definite steps were taken to provide a relief system for southern Baptist ministers. The committee unanimously adopted a report of the relief committee, recommending appointment of a commission of nine, to start work immediately on devising a pension and relief system for ministers, with an endowment fund of not less than $4,000,000. The Sunday school board, which proposed the ministerial relief, already has set aside $100,000 as a nucleus for this fund.

Austrian Sea Raid.

The British admiralty announced Friday that fourteen drifters had been sunk in a raid by Austrian light cruisers in the Adriatic sea and that the British light cruiser Dartmouth was torpedoed in a subsequent engagement with the Austrian warships but gained port safely. The admiralty stated that the British warships—Dartmouth and Bristol—pursued the Austrian vessels to a point near Catarrò, and when battleships came to their assistance the British vessels were compelled to withdraw.

MRS. MAJOR

Mrs. Pearl Gregory Major, wife of Mr. John M. Major, died at her home about six miles east of the city, Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. She had been a sufferer from Bright's disease and other complications for several months, but the immediate cause of death was heart failure. She was a daughter of the late Monroe Gregory, of Church Hill, and was 32 years old. Besides her husband, she is survived by three brothers, William, Eldridge and Ralph Gregory, and one sister, formerly Miss Mary Gregory, who resides in Birmingham, Ala. WILSON GIVES
PROGRAM FOR FOOD CONTROL

Hoover Accepts Appointment as Food Administrator For Nation.

NOT TO RESTRAIN NORMAL

Hoover Calls on the Country to Aid Him in Carrying Out His Plans.

Washington, May 21.—President Wilson, in a statement outlining the administration's food control policy, announced he had asked Herbert C. Hoover to become American food administrator and that Mr. Hoover would accept the place.

The President's plan in brief is as follows:

Full inquiry into the existing available stocks of foodstuffs and into the costs and practices of the various food-producing and distributing trades the prevention of all unwarranted hoarding of every kind and of the control of foodstuffs by persons who are not, in any legitimate sense producers, dealers or traders; the requisitioning when necessary for the public use of food supplies and of the equipment necessary for handling them properly; the licensing of wholesome and legitimate mixtures and milling percentages, and the prohibition of the unnecessary or wasteful use of foods. Authority is asked also to establish prices, but not in order to limit the profits of the farmers, but only to guarantee to them when necessary a minimum price which will insure them a profit where they are asked to attempt new crops, and to secure the consumer against extortion by breaking up corners and attempts at speculation when they occur by fixing temporarily a reasonable price at which middlemen must sell.

RAISING PURE-

Representatives of the association will make address at the community meetings. The itinerary of the meetings will be completed some time this week by a subcommittee, composed of C. E. Marvin, Paynes Depot, Dr. Fred Mutchler, Lexington, and L. B. Shropshire, Louisville. The Executive Committee is composed of C. E. Marvin, Dr. Mutchler; J. Lewis Letterle, Harrods Creek; H. O. Moxley, Shelbyville; R. H. McGaughey, Hopkinsville, and J. H. Gibson, Somerset.

COMPANY D
BACK TO LEXINGTON

All Troops Here Ordered To Return To Mobilization Camp.

MOVEMENT UNEXPLAINED

New Recruits Also Will Be Sent Away For The First Time.

Yesterday was a scene of bustle and activity at the fair grounds and armory. The boys were packing up and getting ready to go back to Lexington. The Headquarters Company and the Supply Company which recently came here from Lexington, together with the fifty or more recruits for Co. D., whom Lieut. Aivan H. Clark has been drilling here, will leave some time today for their new quarters in Lexington.

It is reported that all the other units in West Kentucky have been ordered back to Lexington. Just what is back of all this is not known definitely, but it is known that Lexington is doing everything possible to secure the site for the camp for the 32,000 Kentucky and Indiana troops, which will form the Ninth Division of the new army to be raised.

The government has already accepted a site of 540 acres as a mobilization camp for the National Guard. If the divisional camp is secured 1,000 acres will be needed. Committees from the Lexington Real Estate Exchange are trying to secure options on the additional 460 acres needed. The State rifle range is located at Lexington and is in good hiking distance from the proposed camp site.

Besides Lexington, Louisville and Evansville, Columbus, Ind., and Indianapolis have entered a bid for the site. Speaking of Lexington's chance the Lexington Leader says:

"An army officer of high rank who was recently in Lexington expressed the opinion that troops of northern States might be wintered here because of a milder climate for intensive training. He was granting the assumption that an extensive camp would be established here. One of the camp features specified by the government is 'infrequent interruption to training by inclement weather.'"

General fitness can be found in Lexington's rail facilities, water supply, ideal terrain, available camp and training areas, good markets, freedom from evils which plague many cities, business co-operation, geographical and strategical location, lumber and fuel resources, labor supply, absence of insect pests, unrivalled grazing ranges, model system for wholesome and healthful recreation, shooting range within convenient distance, perfect drainage, immunity from floods, moral and social conditions. All these features are cited in government requirements, and some of them may be rocks upon which the ambitions of several of the bidders will strand."

Incidentally some changes are imminent in officers. There is a rumor current now that Roger D. Williams, brigadier general and commander of the Kentucky brigade, a post he has held since 1904, will resign his place to become a colonel in one of the regiments which may go to France. In that event Col. Win. Colston, commander of the First regiment, is to be moved up to a generalship succeeding Gen. Williams and Lieut. Col. Robert J. McBride, Jr., associate editor of the Louisville Times, is scheduled to move up a notch higher and succeed Col. Colston.

Miss Elizabeth McGee, one of the teachers in the school, will return to her home in Hopkinsville at the close of this term, having resigned her position.—Marion Record-Press.

ON TO BERLIN.

The president has directed an expeditionary force of approximately one division of regular troops, under command of Gen. John J. Pershing, to proceed to France at as early a date as practicable. General Pershing
and staff will precede the troops
abroad.

It is requested that no details or speculation with regard to the mobilization of this command, dates of departure, or other items be carried by the press, other than the official bulletins given out by the war department
in regard thereto.

Announcement of the order followed the signing of the selective draft
war army bill by the president and
the issuing of a statement that under advice of military experts on both sides of the water the president could
not employ volunteers nor avail himself of the "fine vigor and enthusiasm" of former president Roosevelt
for the expedition.

The number of men in the expeditionary forces has not been disclosed.
A division at war strength, however,
totals more than 25,000 men of all
arms and the "approximate" division
of the war department's statement
probably will exceed that figure.

General Pershing, a republican in politics, was a brigadier general when he led the forces into Mexico in pursuit of the bandit Villa. His work at that time won for him selection by
his brother general officers as a major general, and the choice was heartily endorsed by the war department and President Wilson himself.

In his explanation of his reasons
for not availing himself of the so-called Roosevelt amendment to the army bill, Mr. Wilson says his proposal to raise a volunteer corps or division would drain the regular service
of men vitally needed to train the millions that must be whipped into fighting trim in all too brief a time.

The list of regular officers Col.
Roosevelt desired to take with him
has been the subject of much speculation and comment. Because of the old association in Spanish war days
between Major General Leonard Wood and Mr. Roosevelt, it has been regarded as virtually certain that General Wood was the former president's selection for supreme command of the forces.

Under the plans of the war department Gen. Wood, by reason of his great experience in mobilization problems, his unflinching energy and enthusiasm, has been assigned the hard est task of any general officer. He will direct as the commander of the south,
the training of twelve divisions, or more than 300,000 men, among whom without question will be those who will first be selected to follow Gen.
Pershing's forces to France. Even before the bill was signed the war
department announced that the full strength of the national guard would be drafted into the United States army
beginning July 15 and concluding Aug. 5. Orders to bring the regiments
to full war strength immediately
accompanied the notifications sent to all governors. A minimum of 329-000 fighting men will be brought to the colors under those orders, supplementing the 293,000 regulars who will be under arms by June 15. It is
from these forces that the first armies
to join General Pershing at the front
will be drawn, to be followed within
a few months by recurring waves
from the selective draft armies, the first 500,000 men of whom will be mobilized September 1.

FINISHING THE PLOT

By LOUISE OLIVER.

John Penderly saw something shining
on the sidewalk and stooping quickly
lest it be crushed by the foot of some pedestrian, picked it up and put it into his pocket.

In the elevator he took it out and examined it. It was a buckle off a lady's slipper. He had it in his hand
when he opened the door of his office, and Miss Purcell looked up with interest and surprise when he laid it
on her desk. "That's what I've been looking for for six months!" he said.
"I don't understand," she answered,
puzzled.

"Don't you remember my telling you
that I was going to write a book just as soon as I had a real clew to a plot.
I've always held that there wouldn't be so much bosh in fiction if authors
would choose real things to work on instead of making them up. Now, here
I have a mystery—a real one. To whom does the buckle belong?"

"Yes, Mr. Penderly, but that's only an accident, finding it, not a plot." Miss Purcell felt it her duty to discourage
any literary attempt on the part of her
employer's son, in her employer's absence. She had heard so many alter-cations upon the subject. The older Mr. Penderly wished his son to devote all his time and ability to learning the
business, that of foreign trade, while John, who had been assistant editor
of his college journal, insisted that he wished to follow in the footsteps of Kipling.

"No, it's not a plot, but that will come. The thing was to get a real start and now I have it. What kind of person do you think, Miss Purcell,
could have lost that buckle?" He had drawn up a chair quite close to her desk.

She picked it up and looked it over.
It was of silver, square and plain, with fine lines of black enamel tracing on
it that gave it an Oriental look. "I should say," said she, "that it belongs
to a person who knew something pretty
when she saw it and who would be
very much chagrined when she found
it gone."

"But that doesn't get us anywhere.
Let's leave the lady's feelings out of it."

Miss Purcell was pensive. "She might be old, of course, for any shoe
dealer would tell you that buckle is modest enough to be worn by anyone."
"Modest! I knew it. We'll leave out the 'old.' And John made an item with his fountain pen in a small notebook.

"And it is good. It's marked sterling.
The lady would not wear an imitation."

"Honest!" cried John with delight.
"Modest and honest! Holmes and Le-coq were not in it with you. Go on!"

"I'm afraid I can't. I should like to tell you the lady was beautiful, petite
and clever, but my powers of observation fall me here. This buckle could come off a number seven as easily as a two, and the lady may be as homely as Three Eyes in the fairy tale. I'm afraid she wasn't clever, either, or she would have missed it instantly."

"Perhaps she did. There was an immense crowd. I was probably right behind her. I wish I'd looked."

"Mr. Penderly, I'd choose a heroine of my own making. I'm afraid if you are to finish a perfect one you'll be like Tom the Water Boy hunting Mr.
Grimes. It will take you over seven hundred years."

"I have a bully idea," cried John,
springing up. "You'd make a fine
little. I'm going to do a chapter every day and let you go over it, if you will."

John started his book, much to the disgust of his family. It was a marvelous tale of an ambassador's daughter
who, after discovering the willingness of the young man (who finds the lost buckle) to follow her to the ends of the earth, conceals her identity and
uses him to discover state secrets, which she hastens to carry back to her own country. The young man follows,
and then—

Up to this time Miss Purcell had been a great help. She had hurried with her lunch every day and was
back at the office in time to give a half
hour's work to the manuscript. "Now
what?" asked John, putting the latest
chapter before her one day.

"What do you mean?"

"What shall I do next? I've got the poor fellow in a dreadful box and don't know how to get him out. Besides, I find I have not made the girl affectionate enough. She doesn't seem to like him, really."

"Miss Purcell was aghast. "Do you mean that you started your story without finishing your plot first?"

He looked crestfallen. "I'm afraid
I did."

"Then you'll have to begin all over again," she said firmly. "That is, if you really still insist on writing a hook."

"I hate to be beaten, but I'll be blessed if I can think of a thing."

"I told you fact was stronger than fiction," she reminded him, opening a drawer. "Look here; I'll give you a plot."

He bent over eagerly. "What is it?"

She held up two buckles just alike,
one of which he had found.

"It was yours!" he gasped.

"Yes. That's your story—a coincidence."

"But it won't sell without love."

"I can't help that. You'll have to do the rest yourself."

"All right, I shall. Laura, dear, I adore you."

CONSTIPATION

And Sour Stomach Caused This Lady Much Suffering. Black-Draught Relieved.

Meadersville, Ky.—Mrs. Pearl Patrick, of this place, writes: "I was very constipated. I had sour stomach and was so uncomfortable. I went to the doctor. He gave me some pills.
They weakened me and seemed to tear up my digestion. They would gripe me and afterwards it seemed
I was more constipated than before.
I heard of Black-Draught and decided to try it. I found it just what I needed. It was an easy laxative, and not bad to swallow. My digestion soon improved. I got well of the sour stomach, my bowels soon seemed normal,
no more griping, and I would take a dose now and then, and was in good shape."

I cannot say too much for Black-
Draught for it is the finest laxative
one can use."
Theodore's Black-Draught has for
many years been found of great value
in the treatment of stomach, liver and bowel troubles. Easy to take, gentle
and reliable in its action, leaving no
bad after-effects, it has won the praise
of thousands of people who have used
it. NC-135

How Does It Benefit Me?

Business men believe in the Federal Reserve
System, but many of them know little about it
or how it operates.

To tell our community how the system benefits
them and how they can contribute directly to
its support we have prepared a short pamphlet.

If you haven't seen it
we shall be glad either
to mail it to you or give
it to you if you will call.

If so, just come in and get some wire to fence them

We are the "live wires" for garden tools too.

New Cotton Menace Appears.
The pink boll worm, the most dreaded of all cotton pests, has appeared in Mexico. This is a relatively new plague and apparently had its origin
in India. It reached Egypt something like eight years ago. The widespread demand for Egyptian cotton has made it comparatively easy for the worm to travel to substantially all of the cotton producing countries. The pink boll worm hibernates, in the larval
state, in the cotton seed and because of this habit is readily carried to any
quarter of the world by seed or raw cotton exportation. The worm is said to be spreading north towards the United States boundary.

Analyzing Waters.
Mineral waters are easily analyzed
by means of the spectroscopic, as shown by M. Jacques Bardet, and this is likely to prove one of the best methods for this work. He sends a beam of light through the water to be analyzed and thence through the spectroscopic prism, in order to permit of
examining the spectrum, this method
revealing very minute traces of met-
als. He finds the most varied metals
in different samples of mineral water,
and even the rarest metals, such as germanium and gallium, which are very rarely found in nature.

Sounded Too Belligerent.
Seized with longing for the Philadelphia scrapple of his youth, Henry W. Thornton, general manager of the Great Eastern railway, wrote from London to a friend at home and asked for some. He got no answer. When his hunger at last drove him to investigate, he found that the censor had refused to pass his letter because of the belligerent sound of the word
scrapple.

Twenty Slang Names for Girl.
How many different names can you use for "girl"? Oscar Hale of the Curtis Publishing company, talking to the Sons of Delaware at their annual
"ladies night" banquet in Philadelphia,
says twenty. Here's his list: "Chicken, ladybird, queen, beaut, pal, cutie,
peach, baby, doll, fairy, angel, honey-
bunch, gazelle, daisy, squab, pippin,
wren, dame, Jane and skirt."

loud; it will hear you. It doesn't

MANY CREEDS IN ONE CHURCH

Big Problem Solved in One Town
Where Eighteen Denominations
Worship Together.

A federated church, in which 18 denominations are worshipping harmoniously, seems to be solving the small-town problem in Atascadero, San Luis Obispo county, California. In other places a federated church means the
uniting of bodies already organized,
while here the plan came in response
to the popular wish of the people that there be, from the beginning, but one church. Atascadero, it should be said,
is a colony, ten miles long and seven
miles wide, founded a few years ago
by E. G. Lewis.

The church was organized in July,
1915, by the pastor, Dr. Edward A.
Berry, a brother of Bishop F. Berry
of the Methodist church. Doctor Berry made a systematic campaign of the colonists and found but one who opposed the idea. When the book of the church was opened for signatures, 123 members were enrolled. In less than a year the membership went
to 250.

The following denominations are represented: Baptist, Congregational,
Episcopal, Evangelical association,
Freewill Baptist, Friends, Disciples of Christ, Lutheran, Methodist Episcopal,
Methodist Episcopal South, Presbyterian, Presbyterian South, United Presbyterian, United Brethren, Universalist, Unitarian, Spiritualist, Roman Catholic.

The benevolences of the church are
all directed toward helping the needy
in the lands suffering from war.—

Printing Linoleum.

Linoleums are printed by means of a series of blocks, a block being necessary for every color that is shown in the finished pattern. The printing machine contains devices for keeping
the blocks wet with liquid color as the goods pass beneath them. It also has a long table on which the linoleum
moves forward a little bit at a time,
getting a new color at each step. After printing, the goods are again hung
up in a warm room to set the colors.
Then they are ready for market. In cutting the blocks for printing line-
oleums, which is a very complicated
process, every line and dot is worked
out separately by electric machinery
guided by hand. The simplest design
of three or four colors involves the cutting out of thousands of distinct
printing surfaces.

Why He Needed Her.

John McIntosh and his daughter, Janet, from Canada, visited relatives
in Detroit recently. Day after day
Janet and her father went sightseeing,
always together.

The girl's aunt, noticing this one
day, suggested that she let her father
go downtown alone occasionally, and added, jokingly, "Men do not like to have women always tagging along."

"Ay, nantle, but he wubn's me," explained Janet, earnestly. "He canna
thole to stir out o' the hoose his lane.
Ye wadna believe hoo fasht he is ony-
where wi'oot me. Ye see, father
tan'ks his brail Scotch that stranger
folk dinna ken what it's aboot, an' I
hae tae gang wi' him tae the con-
versons!"—Harper's Magazine.

The Pacifist Sword-Cane.

The loaded cane has gone out of fashion, principally for the reason that such a thing is a source of danger lying around loose, as a cane is apt to do; but a whistling cane has been invented by one who is attacked and for any reason unable to make an outcry.
The apparatus is entirely hidden in
the handle of the cane, but yet exposed sufficiently to be quickly reached by the hand of the person carrying it, and
two or three hard compressions will attract instantly the attention of anyone within a distance of several hundred yards.

SHADOW OF GEORGIE BIRD

By JANE OSSORN.

The girl who sat before the roll-top
desk in the little room next to the director's office of the Star Motion Picture company had signed the name
"Georgie Bird" so very much oftener
than she had Ann Evans that she sometimes was half convinced that she was Georgie Bird—a sort of shadow
or second nature of Georgie Bird—and that Ann Evans had been lost in the scuffle. And it had been a scuffle for Ann. She had come to the city with aspirations and here she was,
at twenty-two, still pounding the typewriter—working for $15 a week as Georgie Bird's letter answerer. You couldn't have called her Georgie's secretary, for she seldom saw the radiant Georgie and almost never talked to her. Georgie, you know, was at the height of her stardom.

Of course, among those who admired
the brilliant little actress there were always many who wrote, and to answer these letters with heart-to-heart
enthusiasm was the best sort of adven-turement for Georgie. That is why it was worth while to pay Ann $15 a week.

"I know you girls that work in the movies have a real hard life," wrote
one suitor. "It's a hard life for any woman to lead, and if there aren't any
city fellows willing to step in and help
you out and give you a home, why just
let me tell you there is one out here in the wilds that will. I've made quite a pile—at mines and cattle and one thing or another. I guess it's close to $100,000. And just the sort of girl
I'm looking for is a nice little home-
body like you without any lugs or style or smart manners. I got your address from the man that runs our movie place out here. He said to send the letter to the boss of your concern
and he guessed maybe you'd get it. Just let me know and I'll take the next train East. An old pal of mine that made good out here is in your burg
and he'll vouch for me. We'll look him up first thing I get there."

Ann reread the letter carefully, and
spent five minutes staring at the face
of the photograph that came with it.

"Perhaps he has got the right idea,"
she suggested to herself. "Perhaps Georgie would be much better off." Ann knew that most of the men who knew the real Georgie would have been quite incapable of opening their hearts to her, just in deference to her
superior bank roll and overpowering
success. First Ann wrote the letter that was to be sent, very much like
all the other rejection letters; and
then—and that was where she was wasting time—she wrote the sort of letter that Georgie might have written
—"just for fun," as she told herself.
And in that letter Ann who was beaten
down and stifled, Ann, the country girl,
sick to death of the city, discouraged
and disappointed, wrote from her own heart. For the first time in working hours in months she forgot Georgie
and remembered Ann.

It was not till a week later that Ann
discovered what she had really done.
The manager strutted in. "How many proposals in the last two weeks, since
the last reel has been running?" he asked. He had come to take the number of these declarations as an index
of the heart appeal that Georgie was making. Mechanically Ann put her hand to the pigeonhole marked "Proposals" and counted them. "Thirty-
nine," she answered, and her eyes
caught sight of something that made
her blanch.

Ann looked at the calendar that hung over her desk. Yes, it was the 20th. The wrong letter—the 20th—
the Central station—at 6:45 when the western express came in. The words of the letter she had written and had sent by mistake came to her. A dozen wild schemes went through her mind.
She might—of course it was out of the question but the thought presented itself—she might ask Georgie Bird to keep the promise she had made for
her. For after all the stranger was good to look at, unspoiled by the city.
Unobserved by the manager she locked
her desk and hurried to the boarding house. With what simple finery she had she arrayed herself. Then she hurried from the boarding house.

She stood at the gate where those who meet friends from the West watch
and peer expectantly every night at 6:45 as the Western express draws near. "Shall I or shall I not?" she was debating. "Of course, he will know at a glance and then I'll have to explain.
Perhaps he won't come." And then
he did come through the gate, and she felt herself almost totter as he stepped quickly toward her and the big, boy-
ish man was shaking hands with her
and telling her that he would have known her anywhere. "Only you are a hundred times sweeter than the original," he said with the sincerity and
effectiveness of a man who does not know the practice of flattery.

"But I am really afraid," Ann began as her conscience pricked her repeatedly. She tried to edge in her explanation of her deception. But so intent was the stranger on his plans
that she got no further. And, besides,
being Georgie Bird had come to be second nature. "It isn't, I that he is saying these things to," she assured herself. "It's Georgie Bird and I'm still
the same old Ann that sits at the desk
and answers the letters."

When the explanation finally did
come it was after dinner at the station
restaurant, on the way to the apartment of the friend who was going to
vouch for the stranger.

Daily Thought.

For, of a truth, Love and Strife were

will boundless time be emptied

in their appointed time.—Empedocles.

Both Friend and Foe of Farmer.

Crows do the farmer about as much
harm as good, according to the biological survey of the department of agriculture which has completed a monograph on the relation of crows to
man. The essential conclusions are
that crows are about equally beneficial and injurious, and that they are so wary and sagacious as not to need legal protection. Lack of this, while not endangering the species, will permit farmers to protect their crops or other property whenever necessary.

"Damaged" Wood in Demand.

Old cypress trees are often attacked by a fungus that leaves the heart wood pitted and perforated with minute holes. The wood from such trees is called pecky cypress, and until recently has been almost worthless. Lately, however, architects have discovered its decorative value for interior finish, especially where an antique effect is sought. In consequence pecky cypress is in great demand and bids fair to become the Cinderella of the whole cypress family. Builders are even offering special prices for the "peckiest" specimens.—Youth's Companion.

Did Not Know the Rutabaga.

She was not acquainted with the Swedish turnip, known as rutabaga, sold by the street vendors in the Northwest. When she answered the doorbell and found a stalwart Swede repeating with rising inflection "Rutabaga?" she replied sweetly: "No, sir; Lindhart. I am Mrs. Lindhart, and I do not know the family."

Morning Glories.

Wild morning glories, like the lilies of the field, "toil not, neither do they spin." But though arrayed like Solomon, they are not sought after for landscape decoration. In the plant kingdom they are military oppressors, ousting every other aspirant for vegetable honors from every acre where they obtain a footing. Hence has sprung a strange lawsuit between two wealthy ranchers in Santa Barbara county, the one accusing the other of having seeded his land to these radiant but hostile flowers.—Los Angeles Times.

REMNANTS OF THE PEQUOTS

Few Descendants Left of the Red Men Who Once Lived on Long Island.

Early in the seventeenth century the Pequots occupied a territory about thirty miles in length and fifteen or twenty in width, lying near the mouth of the Thames river on Long Island sound and northward to a little above Norwich. They were estimated variously to number about 3,500, including 700 warriors. In 1636 Endicott estimated 800 warriors, but while traveling through their country on a punitive expedition Mason found only seventy wigwags. Underhill, an eyewitness at the massacre in which the Pequots were destroyed as a nation, says that 400 men perished at the Pequot fort at Groton in 1636.

In 1655 the shattered tribe was reunited, restored to its ancient name and territory, and placed again under its own chiefs by permission of the colonial authorities, F. G. Speck writes in the Southern Workman. The Pequots had, however, to pay an annual tribute in wampum to the English. By 1683 their lands and numbers had diminished considerably and in 1731 they were reported to number only 104 persons. In 1762, still occupying their ancient country in two separate bands, they were estimated at 170. In 1780 many joined the Brothertown Indians in New York state, whence their descendants migrated with the Oneidas to Wisconsin. Here the Brothertown Indians are still to be found, some of the families still recognizing their Pequot descent. In Connecticut the resident band included fifty persons in 1820, under chiefs by the names of Sheller, Shantup and Ned. Upon the inquiry of DeForest, who has written much on the Connecticut tribes in his work, "History of the Indians of Connecticut," in 1848 only three families, amounting to about seventeen persons, were found on the reservation.

DO NOT CROSS YOUR LEGS

William Muldoon, the Famous Physical Instructor, Also Condemned Mouth Breathing.

"Every time a man crosses his legs he gives his heart that much extra work to do," said William Muldoon. "You know what happens to a stream of water when you squeeze the garden hose." This widely known physical instructor attached great importance to proper breathing. He told me of the trouble he had in making John L. Sullivan breathe properly, and he dwelt on the harm that numbers of Americans do themselves (witness the prevalence of catarrhal affections) by the bad habit of mouth breathing.

"Keep your mouths shut. Breathe through your nostrils," he said. If the nostrils are stopped up he explained how they may be made to function properly by simple cleansing ablutions, and he insists that these be performed regularly.

"We need filtered air just as we need filtered water, and the nose is our filter. You boys want to remember that."

Eucalyptus Leaves.

Eucalyptus are evergreens, which shed their bark but not their leaves, but they are not shade trees. The leaves are placed in inclined rather than in horizontal positions, and the passage of light is but little obstructed. For this reason, smaller trees and bushes and grass grow underneath, and the woods in places assume the appearance of a jungle from which arise the towering shafts of trees. It is interesting to note that primitive types of eucalyptus, as well as the young or more modern types, have horizontal leaves, pointing to a time in the geologic past when the climate was more congenial and no precautions to conserve moisture need be taken.—National Geographic Magazine.

Drug Store Latin.

In one of the southern prohibition states a physician had occasion to order some whisky for a patient. It so happened that the whisky reached the express office on Sunday morning. The doctor sent for the package, and the express agent returned the reply that the whisky could not be delivered on Sunday. Thereupon the doctor sent word that the whisky was for a very sick patient and must be had at once. The agent sent a reply that if the doctor would write a prescription for the whisky he could get it. The doctor wrote upon his prescription blank: "Be temperate, tyrant," and the whisky was promptly delivered.—Medical Journal.

Remarkable Tibetan Building.

"The only building in Lhasa (Tibet) that is at all imposing is the Potala," writes Edmund Candler. "It is not a palace on a hill, but a hill—that is also a palace. Its massive walls, its terraces and bastions stretch upward from the plain to the crest as if the great bluff rock were merely a foundation stone planted there."

It Couldn't Be True.

"There is some money, my love," said the husband. "I don't want any," replied the wife. "Come now, darling, take this $10 note and go out shopping." "Thank you, dear, but I really don't care to. I would rather stay at home and see to the housework." Then the husband awoke and found, as the reader has already suspected, that he had been dreaming.

About Seals.

That the seal is a typical marine animal is well known. Hence, the occurrence of a species of phoca in Lake Baikal, southern Siberia, which is of fresh water and has no connection with the sea, is of special interest. Recently Dr. Charles Hooy has obtained skins and skulls of two specimens of the Baikal seal which have been offered to the Museum of Natural History, where the species has not hitherto been represented. It is the only seal which habitually lives in fresh water, though the common seal will often resort to estuaries, and even ascend the Trent, as far up as Hazel-ford, where it has been shot. The Vi-kare seal again, common in the Arctic regions and also found in the north of the Baltic, occurs in Lakes Ladoga and Onega. It is able, however, to reach these from the Baltic by means of the Rivers Neva and Svir.

Kitten Puts Out Fire.

John is only a black and white kitten of nondescript breed, but if there is such a thing as a medal for bravery, he certainly has claim upon it. One morning I was sitting before the fireplace, watching John as he lay on a hassock on the opposite side, apparently asleep, but he was far from it. We were burning some old trash in the fireplace, and suddenly, with a report like that of a pistol shot, a cladder about as large as a dime came flying through the air and alighted in a basket used by John as a sleeping place. This basket was lined with a woolen cloth and the cladder began to unroll and an incandescent fire was at once under way. John, giving the call of the cat tribe, pounced on the blazing cloth, trampled it out with his fore feet, and then, when he was satisfied it was extinguished, quietly curled up and went to sleep, just as though he had not done a thing that was a wonderful exhibition of feline sense.—Our Dumb Animals.

Megaphone Resembles Ram's Horn.

A Boston physician has invented a megaphone which is constructed on the theory that the original horn—the ram's horn—was and still is technically correct for sound reproduction. His megaphone is curved instead of the straight funnel-like shape of most other instruments, and one of the most interesting and useful features about it is the ability to use it without having to interfere with one's vision.

"OUR CLOTHES NOT HONEST"

They're Just an Imitation From Beginning to End, a College Woman Lecturer Declares.

Woman and clothes was one of the principal subjects discussed at the course in home economics conducted by the Pennsylvania state college in conjunction with its extension school, the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times states, Miss M. Jane Newcomb, the lecturer, criticized her sisters for blindly following fashions whether those fashions were suitable to them or not. The seriousness of the clothes problem, in its moral, spiritual, physical and economic bearing on life and character, was dwelt on by Miss Newcomb, who among other things, said:

"So deeply have we become involved in the matter of clothes that it will take the courage of strong conviction to free ourselves, and these convictions must be built on strong principles."

"So anxious are we to dress like some one else or according to some style shown in a shop window that our clothes are not honest. They are imitation from beginning to end. In truth most of fashion in dress is just that of imitation. What is the most glaring phase of the problem at the present time is the proportion of income spent for clothes. Working girls determined to be in fashion spend their whole salary on their clothes, eat insufficient food and are physical if not moral wrecks in a few years as a result."

HAD AN EXCELLENT REASON

Witness Explains How He Knew All About Dead Man Without Ever Having Seen Him.

The learned counsel in the great will case literally beamed with joy. Here was a witness who was everything a witness should be.

"I congratulate you, sir," he said, enthusiastically. "Your memory for detail does you infinite credit. And on behalf of the numerous relatives of the testator who are present in court I should like to thank you for the very flattering, though none the less truthful, description that you have just given of the esteemed gentleman who is now, alas, no more."

A murmur of applause went round the crowded court.

"I presume," continued the learned counsel, "that you were very intimate with the testator during his lifetime?" The witness hesitated and blushed a crimson red. "N-no," he answered, lamely. "In fact, I never saw him in my life."

"But, really, sir," cried the lawyer, in surprise, "I fail to see how you could give such an accurate and flattering description of him if you never saw him?"

The witness gave a very sickly smile. "Perhaps you will understand better," he said, "when I tell you that I married his widow?" — Rochester Times.

Glass Plates Replace Films.

Glass plates, readily printed from negatives, are being used in place of expensive films, in producing motion pictures for the home. In the Bettini apparatus, about 600 small views are contained in rows on a single plate 5 by 8 inches in size, and such a plate replaces 70 or 80 feet of film. The lens is moved mechanically along the rows, at each end that change from one row to the next is made without flicker. A continuous succession of plates may be passed through, and the change from plate to plate is made automatically without interruption of the scenes thrown upon the screen. In a still simpler apparatus, the views are printed spirally upon noninflammable disks of celluloidlike material, each series being limited to the capacity of one disk or record.

Professional Nursing New.

"Thirty years ago professional nursing was unknown. The care of the sick was left to the untrained, elderly women who were looked upon much as cooks are regarded today—as inferiors who did the disagreeable tasks of the sick room and kept tiresome vigils, but of whom little trained intelligence was expected. With a growing knowledge of microbes, antiseptics, disinfectants, the speed demanded in the operating room, requiring an intimate knowledge of numerous instruments upon the part of an assistant and their rapid supply to the operator, the world learned that nurses required training, and their occupation was elevated to a profession."

Thunder and Theology.

Two negroes were caught in a terrific thunderstorm in the South and took refuge in a barn, but before they could enter they were completely drenched.

The thunder crashed and pealed between flashes of lightning and blinding dashes of rain. One of the darkies thought maybe a little strong language would ease his mind; but his companion remonstrated with him.

"Look heah, yo' Charles Richard—yo' quit yo' cussin'. Don't yo' know dat Gawd's got yo' completely in his power jest now?"

A New Creation.

Margaret, aged eleven, had just returned from her visit to the zoo.

"Well," said her mother, smiling, "did you see the elephants and the giraffe and the kangaroos?"

Margaret looked thoughtful.

"We saw the elephant and the giraffe and the kangaroos."

"What?" said Mrs. Blank.

"The kangaroos."

HEIFERS FOR 43 BRIGHT BOYS

Novel Plan to Encourage the Raising of Blooded Cattle.

LOCAL BANKS BEHIND IT

Shorthorn Cattle Are Distributed To All Parts of the County.

The people of Christian county believe that our county is the best in the state and that the state is the best in the Union; but in 1910 Christian county was 21st in cattle raising, although fourth in the production of hay and corn and other things necessary to raise cattle with. This ratio has been maintained to date, and in view of this fact the Planters Bank & Trust Co. of this city has inaugurated a shorthorn club. Forty-three shorthorn heifers of registered stock were bought by W. R. Hinsley, President of the National Livestock Commission of East St. Louis, for the bank.

With the view of increasing the production of graded cattle in the county the bank chose W. T. Fowler, James A. McKenzie, G. T. Wyatt, D. T. Craynor, F. L. Hamby, J. W. Garnett, R. H. Kemp, George Mimms, T. F. Clardy, T. J. McReynolds, with S. L. Cowherd as chairman, as a committee to distribute the cattle among the boys of the county.

Saturday the cattle arrived and were quartered at Cowherd & Altsheber's stock barns. The boys met at the bank and the Rev. J. T. Hawkins, A. H. Eckles, County Agent McKenzie and S. L. Cowherd made shorthorn talks to the young men. The boys then gave their notes for the cost price of the heifers and signed an agreement to bring the heifers and calves, if any, to town on a certain day this fall and sell them at auction. The amount of the note will be deducted from the selling price and the boy will be given the increase. They are to take good care of the stock and be subject to the instructions of County Agent McKenzie, who will make calls on the boys without notice to see how they are getting along. Each boy drew from a box a metal tag with a number on it. His name and age was then written on it. The whole crowd had their pictures taken and then went to the barns and each boy got the heifer which had the same number that he held. It was a happy crowd of boys that left town, each taking a fine young heifer, and each boy was dreaming of the big day this fall at the fair grounds when his stock will be sold.

KENTUCKY CROP REPORT

Issued By The State Department of Agriculture, Frankfort, Ky.

The crop report as of May 1st is the first report from this Department for 1917. We have received an unusually large number of reports, and the majority of these give conditions as backward owing to the cold and dry weather prevailing. Only 70 per cent of plowing for corn is done and but very little planting. The ground has broken dry and cloddy. With favorable weather, conditions will be greatly improved.

From all parts of the State come reports to the effect that the farmers are awake to the seriousness of the feed and food situation and they are making unusual efforts to increase their production. This increase would be much greater if it were not for the high cost and scarcity of seed.

Wheat: Much of the wheat was winter killed and what remains is reported as being thin on the ground. It has not shown the much hoped for improvement. The percentage of originally sowed is given at 90 per cent, and of this left on April 25th, is 71 per cent, while the condition is given at 66 per cent.

Rye: The acreage of rye originally sown is 88 per cent, and 79 per cent of that was left April 25th and the condition is 80 per cent.

Barley: Only a few reported on barley and the original acreage was placed at 88 per cent, of which 78 per cent remained and the condition summed up to 79 per cent.

Oats: Acreage of oats planted is 88 per cent, while the condition is fairly good.

Corn: An unusual effort is being made for a large corn crop, and, with weather conditions favorable there will be more corn raised in Kentucky than ever before. The reports give the acreage planned at 104 per cent, but only 70 per cent of plowing is done. Very little planting has been done owing to the cold and backward spring.

Hemp: Reports from the hemp growing district shows an increased acreage planned of 106 per cent as compared with last year, which was the largest acreage and yield of this crop in many years.

The acreage planned of burley tobacco is 96 per cent, while the condition of tobacco beds is given at 82 per cent. The acreage of dark tobacco is 92 per cent and condition of tobacco beds is 86 per cent.

Great interest in garden truck is manifested, and with seasonable conditions bids fair to be the greatest production in this respect ever known. Acreage of potatoes is given at 103 for the State average.

The outlook for fruit as compared with an average year is fairly good, especially for apples, which is given at 91 per cent, peaches only 78, plums at 84 and cherries 84.

Condition of grasses is low for this season of the year owing to the cold weather and lack of moisture. Bluegrass is given at 85 per cent, clover 71, alfalfa 87. Some localities estimate more soy beans will be planted than ever before.

Livestock is generally thrifty, but a great shortage of breeding animals is reported. The approximate number on hand reckoned in percentage as compared with last year and the conditions are as follows:

	On Hand	Condition
Horses.....	93 per cent	92 per cent
Mules.....	90 per cent	93 per cent
Cattle.....	90 per cent	90 per cent
Hogs.....	85 per cent	92 per cent
Sheep.....	89 per cent	90 per cent

There is an alarming shortage of young stock. The ten per cent of lambs is given at 84. Taken as a whole the crop reports show that "Everybody is busy." The farmers are showing their patriotism in an endeavor to do all in their power to produce more, and are bending every energy and using every means at their command to help Uncle Sam at this time of need, and are looking forward eagerly for favorable weather conditions to this end.

MEN ON ITALIAN MISSION

Prince Udine Will Head Delegation to This Country—Marconi on Board.

Washington, May 21.—Representatives of every element in the political-scientific business and social life of Italy is the commission of the distinguished Italians soon to land in America. As officially announced by the Italian embassy the principal purpose of the Italian government in sending the commission is to convey to the American government and people some sense of the Italian people's deep gratitude to the Americans, not only for joining with the entente allies in the war, but for the many acts of charity and benevolence extended to Italian soldiers since the beginning of the war.

Like the British and French commissions which preceded, the Italians also have other motives in coming to America, such as the extension to the American army and navy of the benefit of experience acquired by the Italian army and navy at the cost of much blood and suffering during the war.

The mission includes a prince of the Italian reigning house, Ferdinando di Savoia, Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of wireless telegraphy; two members of the cabinet, Enrico Arlotto and Marquis Borasarelli, and two Italian statesmen and publicists, Mr. Nitti and Mr. Ciuffelli.

The head of the mission is Prince of Udine, eldest son of the Duke of Genoa and first cousin to King Victor Emanuel.

Henderson's Guess.

Seven million men have been killed in the war thus far and the total casualties exceed 45,000,000. This is the estimate made by Arthur Henderson, member of the British war council. He said the end of the war was not an immediate prospect and that it would not come until Germany's plan of military domination was defeated.

Emerson Winters Company

THESE two cheery looking people comprise the Emerson Winters Company, advertised to appear here the sixth day of the Chautauque. They are Mr. Emerson Winters and Alice Stire Winters. A Texas newspaper described them as "Winners." "They gave," this paper said, "the brightest, sprightliest, cheeriest, jolliest, laughiest and smilingest entertainment that has come down this section of the pike for many a day. But they are misnamed. There is nothing cold or frigid about them. They are as smiling as spring and as warm as summer."

Self-Poise.

Old Davy Skinner, a fisherman on the Cape Cod coast, was noted for unflinching self-poise and economy of words. No one ever knew old Davy to become in the least excited, nor did he ever waste a word.

One summer day he was rowing along in his boat when a dory containing five or six young summer people was capsized near him. Naturally there were screams and wild confusion, in the midst of which Davy rowed over to the scene of the disaster and said placidly to the young people who were clinging to the boat, screaming for help:

"Haddn't you better git in?"

Macaroni Beans.

The "macaroni beans" of North Manchuria, a peculiar product described in a recent commerce report, are consumed entirely by the Chinese farmers. The beans are of two kinds—a red and yellow variety that is very floury and a small green bean that is unusually glutinous—and for use the two are mixed together, ground into flour, and made into a paste, which is forced through small holes into long strings or noodles. These dry quickly and keep well in any climate. They are cooked in water, like macaroni or vermicelli, and this method of using gives the beans their trade name.

Some Odd Expressions.

Here are a few funny mistakes: Home-made pie (sign in bakery). Small steak, 20 cents; extra small steak, 25 cents (card in restaurant). Waste No Food

Food Waste of About 700 Million Dollars.

"For partial immediate relief, every individual and community should consider earnestly the matter of food conservation and the limitation of waste. As a Nation we seem to have a disad of economizing. In many homes there is a strong feeling that it is 'only decent' to provide more than will be eaten and that it is demeaning to reckon closely. The experts of the Department of Agriculture report to me that the dietary studies made by them point to an annual food waste of about $700,000,000. Of course, the waste in families of very limited means is slight, but in the families of moderate and ample means the waste is considerable. Even if the estimate were reduced by half, the waste would still be enormous.

"The food waste in the household, the experts assert, results in large measure from bad preparation and bad cooking, from improper care and handling, and, in well-to-do families, from serving an undue number of courses and an over-abundant supply and failing to save and utilize the food not consumed. As an instance of improper handling, it is discovered that in the preparation of potatoes 20 per cent of the edible portion in many cases is discarded."—SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE, March 3, 1917.

Food is Wasted

(a) When we eat more food than our bodies need for growth and repair and to supply energy for our work. Overeating tends to poor health and fat instead of brawn, makes us sluggish and indolent instead of energetic and resourceful. Eat enough and no more. Eat for physical and mental efficiency.

(b) When food is burned or spoiled in cooking. Improperly prepared or poorly seasoned food will be left on the table and probably wasted. Buy food wisely and then prepare it carefully.

(c) When too much food is prepared for a meal. Unserved portions are apt to be thrown into the garbage pail or allowed to spoil. Many housekeepers do not know how to use left-over foods to make appetizing dishes.

(d) When too much food is served at a meal. Uneaten portions are left on the plate and later thrown into the garbage pail. Learn to know the needs of your family, and serve each no more than you think he will want.

(e) When anything edible is allowed to go to the garbage pail or allowed to spoil for lack of proper handling.

(f) When food is handled carelessly. Buy clean food, keep it clean until used, be neat in all details of cooking and serving. This lessens waste and is a valuable health measure as well.

Feed Your Own Family First

Don't feed high-priced human food to hogs or chickens.

Don't send valuable food to the incinerator or the fertilizer heap.

Don't pour into the sewer nourishing food in the shape of milk, skim milk, sweet or sour soup, gravy, or melted fat, or water in which cereals or vegetables have been cooked.

Keep good food out of your garbage pail and kitchen sink.

Old English Physicians.

The England of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries was a rich field for physicians, and their influence was extended in many directions. Some were very serious-minded persons who did much to advance medical science—others were famed for their adroit ways of amassing wealth. If England has produced Doctor Arbuthnot, it has also had such practitioners as gruff Hans Sloane, who growled at his aristocratic patients instead of flattering them.

Potatoes Best Cooked in Skins.
Approximately 20 per cent of each potato pared by ordinary household methods is lost in the process. The loss includes much and sometimes all of the portion of the tuber containing important soluble salts. Potatoes that are boiled and baked in their skins lose practically none of their food value.

Most disfiguring skin eruptions, scrofula, pimples, rashes, etc., are due to impure blood. Burdock Blood Bitters as a cleansing blood tonic is well recommended. $1 at all stores.—Advertisement.

An Irresistible Call.
Hilda, the Swedish maid, had served her mistress faithfully for a year, when one day she announced her intention of leaving:
"Why, Hilda, what is the matter? Is the work too hard? Or don't you like your wages?"
"Do work he be all right, an' de wages he be too, but de beau—he moost have me."

Very Puzzling.
Eddie who had always attended a Baptist Sunday school, was taken on a visit to Sunday school at a Methodist church. "Mamma, how is that?" he said. "I thought you said this was a Methodist Sunday school."
"So it is, my dear."
"Well, Hilda, the lesson was all about John the Baptist."—Christian Herald.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK EDITION OF THE NEW YORK WORLD IN 1917

Practically a Daily at the Price of a Weekly. No other Newspaper in the world gives so much at so low a price.

The value and need of a newspaper in the household was never greater than at the present time. The great war in Europe is now half way into its third year, and, whether peace be at hand or yet be far off, it and the events to follow it are sure to be of absorbing interest for many a month to come.

These are world-shaking affairs, in which the United States, willing or unwilling, is compelled to take a part. No intelligent person can ignore such issues.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and the HOPKINSVILLE KENTUCKIAN (Tri-weekly,) together for one year for $2.65. The regular subscription price of the two papers is $3.00.

PEARLERS' LOT IS HARD ONE

When Divers Do Not Succumb to Hardships Attending Work the Sharks Get Them.

The lot of the native pearlmen of the Persian gulf is a hard one, for all run the risk of getting scurvy from the lack of fresh food. Ice, of course, is unknown in the gulf, and the impure water breeds disease. The boiling and filtering of water do not appeal to Oriental people as yet. The salts, or rope, pullers, get palms as hard and cracked as an ancient Bedouin's heel. They could prevent this by wearing gloves, but that would be a sign of effeminacy, and bring ridicule upon them.

The exposure in the water gives many of the divers weak hearts and tuberculosis, and many of them become deaf because the weight of the water breaks their ear drums. Sharks do not create the scare that one recently did on the Atlantic coast. They abound in the gulf and many divers have had a hard bitten off. One young Arab was brought to the American dispensary at Kuwait with his whole side laid open by a shark that had gotten a wide mouth hold upon him. The boy survived. We asked him if he would give up diving now.

"No," he said, "I will go back next year, I have to."

The danger of drowning is great, for sometimes a strong current carries the diver far away from his boat, and before the rope puller can bring him back he is drowned. The Arabs have no pulmotors, and they are not efficient in giving "first aid." If a man remains too long under the water, it was "written on his forehead," and that is all there is to it.—E. E. Calverley in the Scientific American Supplement.

GOOD FARMERS ARE NEEDED

But It Might Be Possible for Too Many People to Go Back to the Land, Says Writer.

To jump from the frying pan into the fire is said to afford slight relief. Were half of the city population to "go back to the land," I fancy that the second estate of man would be quite as unhappy as the first, Girard observes in the Philadelphia Ledger.

A succession of more crops than we could eat would reduce prices so low that there would ensue an exodus of disgusted newly made farmers back to the towns. For if half the population began to practice medicine, or made hats, or weave carpets, those vocations would offer no more attractions for ambitious men.

So with farming. They know in the South what too much cotton means. They once burned corn in Kansas because it cost less than wood.

Farming is a good game now—for the man who knows how to farm. It is not so good for the shoemaker, blacksmith, store clerk or typewriter.

Mr. Morgan, I understand, finds banking a good occupation, but the farmer who set up in trade alongside of him wouldn't. We do need more good farmers, and the agricultural schools are making in four years as expert tillers of the soil as those folks in Lancaster whose ancestors tilled the soil for a thousand years.

FABRICS USED AS CURRENCY

American Cotton Cloth Was at One Time Medium of Purchase in Mohammedan World.

There was a time when American cotton cloth was the medium of purchase in a considerable part of the Mohammedan world. In the course of his explorations in Africa Henry M. Stanley found the Arabs using this cotton cloth, of rough, unbleached variety, as currency. This cloth was called "Merican." So many measures of "Merican" could buy so many tusks of ivory, so many wives or so many slaves.

All through European and Asiatic Turkey down into Arabia, in Persia, and on the borderland of India the "Merican" from the mills of New England was the universally used cotton cloth. Turkey obtained most of her cotton cloth from New England. "Merican" was ultimately swept from the markets of the Mohammedan world by English goods of a cheaper grade, some of it manufactured in Lancashire and some of it produced by English mills in India.

In the search for markets under the intense competition that will prevail after the war, the American manufacturer would do well to turn to Turkey and the other parts of the Mohammedan world in which half a century ago he enjoyed a practical monopoly, says the New York Mail. There are nearly 22,000,000 of people in Turkey. Most of them wear cotton instead of woolen garments. Owing to the war which Great Britain is waging against Turkey, British goods will not be very popular in the Ottoman empire when peace is restored.

HOW DIFFERENT SHIPS SINK

Nearly Every Class or Design of Vessel Has a Particular Way of Going Down.

Nearly every class or design of vessel sinks in a particular way. For instance, the old type of single-bottom steamers, with few or no bulkheads—that is, in the modern sense of the term—almost invariably founders on more or less of an even keel, which means that they sink level, and not with their bow or stern up in the air, London Tit-Bits says.

This is accounted for by the fact that at whatever point the water may enter, it practically finds its own level, as there are no subdivisions to obstruct it.

Now, in the case of a modern vessel, which is built with numerous subdivisions, it invariably happens that she founders with her bow or stern high out of the water; or else she sinks with a heavy list, or cant, to one side or the other. The reason for this is that the bulkheads prevent the water which enters the vessel from finding its level; consequently, when one particular portion of the ship is full of water, while the remainder is practically watertight, that part which is water laden sinks first, owing to its greater weight.

It is for this reason that such terrible loss of life frequently occurs in modern shipwrecks. Owing to the uneven sinking, it is often found impossible to lower the majority of the lifeboats, as they would fall to reach the water.

MOVIES ARE PUT TO NEW USE

Orchestra Directed by Screen Reproduction of Noted Conductor Handling Baton.

The latest in the fields of motion pictures and music is a combination of the two, in which the mechanical processes of one are used to direct the artistic processes of the other.

This is nothing more nor less than the conducting of an orchestra by means of the screen reproduction of a noted conductor, handling the baton. It has been tried in Chicago as an experiment, with such compositions as the overture for "William Tell," and Mendelssohn's "Spring Song."

The system is tried out and found acceptable consists simply of projecting on a screen in full view of the orchestra, pictures previously taken of an impresario conducting the composition to be rendered. It is claimed that because the pictures are more conspicuous to the musicians than the man himself could be, it is easier for them to follow his baton. The projecting machines are motor driven, this enabling the operator to regulate them to any speed desired and to maintain it without breaks.

Sesplanes Fold Their Wings.

Owing to the large number of sesplaners employed by the entente naval forces in the present war, especially in the waters of the near East, the British and French aircraft designers have developed a special type of hydroplane provided with folding wings, notes the Scientific American. This feature results in a great saving of space on board a warship or special mother ship when a large number of sesplaners are carried. The wings are hinged to the fuselage so that they can be swung back when the craft is to be stored away, yet the sesplane can be made ready and equipped for sustained service in the space of a few minutes by the aviator and his corps of assistants.

Small but Notable Kingdom.

Smallest in population among the kingdoms of the world, "Hedjaz" carries to the Arabic brain the idea of "separation." The newly made king rules indeed over a desolate land, and about as many subjects as could be accommodated in Bristol. But his "kingdom" is nevertheless the richest in the world, from the Moslem point of view, since it holds the cities of Mecca and Medina. Our illustrious ally, lately a shereef, is in the way of dignity; for he not only controls the holy places, but being a direct descendant of Mohammed, his position as the new caliph should become unchallengeable.—London Chronicle.

Glass Gardens.

A few square feet of sunny ground and a hotbed or cold frame, large or small, will produce vegetables and flowers weeks ahead of those who garden without glass. A little glass adds a wonderful amount of interest to the garden and prolongs the season for many weeks in the spring and in the autumn. A good frame with sash will last for years, and this is to be considered in buying good material at the outset.

Not Much Difference.

Practicing economy and on the piano are about the same stunt, after all. They enable one to meet the notes when they're due.

THE PENALTY OF OVERWORK

Beginning to Feel
The Strain.

The heavy tax of overwork—the extra strain so necessary to many trades and occupations is hard on the kidneys. The kidneys begin to fail in their work and the poisonous matter collects in the system. If your work seems hard for you, if you have a lame, weak or aching back, if you seem tired and listless, if you notice sediment in the urine, unnatural color or irregular passages and seem to be running down without apparent cause, begin at once with Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy that has proven so beneficial to your neighbors. It has brought strength to the backs of thousands of working men and women. Read Hopkinsville proof:

O. J. Willis, 534 O'Neal Avenue, Hopkinsville, says: "Overstraining at my work caused my kidneys to become weak. My back ached dreadfully. I was so sore and lame I could hardly lift anything or do any stooping. My kidneys acted too frequently and annoyed me day and night. I used Doan's Kidney Pills as directed and they went right to the spot, ridding me of the backaches and putting my kidneys in good order. Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Willis had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y."

NEGROES TO BE ARRESTED

Authorities to Make Effort to Prevent Influx of Blacks
From South.

Cincinnati, O., May 21.—The increasing menace occasioned by the continuous influx of negro laborers from Tennessee, Georgia and other southern states, has resulted in drastic police action by Mayor George Pucht in an effort to bar the negro from this city. Sunday squads of police and health officers watched all incoming trains from the south and placed all negroes under arrest who were unable to show good police records in their southern homes, and who had sufficient amount of cash in their pockets to secure clearly comfortable living for at least six weeks to come. Medical examination of each incomer will be made, besides thorough fumigation of their clothes. The fact that numerous fires in tenement houses inhabited by negroes and poor whites, huddled together to the number of fifteen to a room, has resulted in the situation becoming acute, and the health conditions alarming. It is calculated that at least a third of a million negroes have landed north in the past eight months as the result of fake stories spread by fraudulent labor agents, of high wages paid in the north, and meetings are being held nightly by both negro and white residents here to warn the southern negro of the real labor conditions and assist the misguided ones to return south. The federal health authorities have also agreed to take a hand in the crisis.
